

Impact by Rebeka

home

view all

An example of impact is hitting something.

An other example is dropping something.

Spilling something can also be compact.

Impact

Popplet restricts students from inserting a video. So now we are going to explore how can students take this learning to the next level. What app can help them show more?

Popplet and Science

This activity was driven by students. They were given iPads and a single science word (impact) and told to use Popplet. I had conferenced briefly with one student earlier in the day to show him Popplet. He became the leader later that day and was collaborating with this peers.

I found this example on the iPad a few days later and can now tell that the student has a good understanding and that she directed her own learning. By adding her own photos, she is applying her understanding and communicating it clearly to others.